LIST

OF THE SPECIMENS OF

BRITISH SPONGES

IN

THE COLLECTION

OF THE

BRITISH MUSEUM.

LONDON:

PRINTED BY ORDER OF THE TRUSTEES.

1848.

INTRODUCTION.

THE principal object of the present List has been to give a complete Catalogue of the British specimens of Sponges contained in the Collection of the British Museum, indicating at the same time the peculiarities of each as regards age, habitation, condition, and the source from whence it has been received.

With this view, the different individuals of each species contained in the Collection are indicated by the letters a, b, c, &c., following the name of the species and its synonyma, and followed by the habitat, state, and the source from whence the specimens were derived.

Those specimens which have been presented to the Museum have the name of the donor; and in general the collection from whence the specimen has been purchased or procured in exchange is also marked, as it often gives some authenticity to its history.

In the adoption of the generic and specific names it has been thought right to use, wherever it was possible, that which was first applied to the species. As far as regards the specific name, there is comparatively little difficulty in the application of this simple rule; but generic names have been used by different authors in senses so widely different, and the groups which they were meant to designate have been so variously extended and restricted, that it was no easy matter to determine, where several names have been used, which of them ought to be preferred. Great attention has been paid to consult the original authority, to know the type, and select the name which appeared to be the most ancient; and reference is made to the work in which, and the date when, each genus and its synonyma were respectively published.

Under each species there have been appended all the names under which the animal or coral has been mentioned since the establishment of the Linnæan system of nomenclature, and reference is given to the work in which these were first used, and especially to the different works treating on British animals in which it is mentioned, and also a reference to the best figures. The chief part of these references have been extracted from the admirable and classical work on the Sponges by Dr. George Johnston, additional references having been made to older exotic works which have escaped his researches, or to others which have appeared since his publication.

The British Museum is fortunate in having received the chief portion of the specimens from the several authors who originally described the species, so that there can be no doubt of the specimens being the real representatives of the names they bear; for besides possessing some of the original specimens collected and described by Colonel George Montague and Dr. W. E. Leach, Dr. George Johnston of Berwick has most kindly presented to the Museum the whole of his Collection, which he used in the preparation of his classical work on this subject.

As the attention to the laws of priority, now so universally adhered to, has caused the alteration of a few of the names used in Dr. Johnston's work, a Concordance showing the changes has been added.

JOHN EDWARD GRAY.
